

Asia Society Intern Opportunity

Location: New York

Department: Center on U.S.-China Relations

Period of Internship: Winter 2015 and/or Spring 2016

Announcement:

ChinaFile (chinafile.com), an online magazine on contemporary China published by the Center on U.S.-China Relations, is currently accepting applications for Winter 2015 and Spring 2016 Internship positions to assist with research and writing on its Environment section.

ChinaFile is an online publication that aims to facilitate a broad and nuanced public conversation about China and its place in the world. Our staff is a small, dedicated group of professional journalists, editors, and videographers, both Chinese and American, with vast experience working both in China and the United States.

The Environment Intern will be an integral part of the ChinaFile team and help in the research and preparation of content for daily publication on the site. The responsibilities will include researching stories and data relating to China's environmental challenges, preparing pieces for publication, helping with social media outreach, as well as supporting day-to-day website operations.

From this internship, you will gain a strong network of China contacts, language practice in Mandarin Chinese, and the experience of participating in the production of a new and growing website.

This is an unpaid internship.

Education /prior experience most suited for this internship:

ChinaFile environment interns are expected to stay up-to-date on China-related environment news and to have an interest in media and journalism.

This intern should have a strong interest and familiarity with Chinese culture and current affairs – including Chinese social media, the environment, social issues, politics, international relations, or other contemporary issues.

The intern should have interest in journalism and environmental issues; strong writing and online research skills; familiarity with social media; interest in developing online media expertise; basic html experience a plus; experience using Drupal or other CMS a plus.
