ASIA NEXT

Is Your Business Prepared for the Asian Future?

Asia matters. For the last decades, the geopolitical and economical center of gravity of the world has continually shifted eastwards. Asia is no longer just a manufacturing hub, or a market opportunity – it is the world’s most populous and dynamic region.

This shift in global power dynamics is reshaping the world order as we know it – and is translating into real-world implications for companies. That is why it is crucial for companies and organizations to cultivate in-house Asia Competence – whether they have a presence in Asia or not.

To address this need, Asia Society Switzerland, in collaboration with the International Institute for Management Development (IMD), launched Asia NEXT in 2021. Specifically tailored to executives and decision-makers, this Executive Education program equips participants with an in-depth understanding of key developments and issues in Asia, and encourages them to reflect on the impact they have on Switzerland – and on their own industries and professional roles.

“Asia Competence has become an indispensable skill which can no longer be relegated to a specialized team or department. Leaders at all levels – headquarters, boards, and management – must continuously develop and expand their Asia Competence to ensure long-term success and navigate a multipolar world.”

Nico Luchsinger
Executive Director
Asia Society Switzerland

About Asia NEXT

The first and only Executive Education program in Switzerland with the specific purpose of imparting Asia Competence, Asia NEXT offers participants the opportunity to actively identify and assess potential challenges and opportunities, ask the right questions, and know where to seek informed answers.

In a concise and interactive format that accommodates a demanding work schedule, the program provides valuable opportunities for participants to engage with industry experts, business leaders, world-class professors, and one another.

Upon graduating from the program, participants receive a certificate issued by Asia Society Switzerland and IMD, and become part of the Asia NEXT Alumni Community.

Program Overview

Five thematic pillars form the foundation of the program, while several additional elements round off the program's curriculum.

All sessions are designed to be highly interactive: active participation and contribution to the discussion is encouraged and expected. Participants are required to prepare for each session. Pre-reading materials are provided in advance.

In More Detail

Strategic Empathy

Strategic empathy means looking at issues from the perspective of others and understanding the motivations behind their actions. Understanding a country's present requires understanding its past: history plays a crucial role and is this session's central focus.

Geopolitics

With the U.S. increasingly focusing on internal policy issues instead of foreign policy, other global powers, such as China and India, are on the rise. In this session, we discuss important geopolitical shifts and how they ripple effects are being felt by businesses and politics worldwide.

Economics

The Asia-Pacific region is anticipated to be the key long-term growth engine. However, shifting alliances and geopolitical tensions are causing fluctuations in trade relations, supply chains, and financial markets. In this session, we assess the global economic outlook in light of this uncertain environment.

Innovation & Technology

Asia is one of the fastest-growing regions in terms of innovation and technological advancement. In this session, we examine how countries in Asia are leveraging this advantage to drive economic growth and sustainable development.

Connecting the Dots

In this final session, we bring together key insights from previous sessions and connect the dots. We discuss your main takeaways, and reflect how the knowledge you've gained through the program will shape your decision-making going forward.
