

Rangoli Activity

Rangoli

- Rangoli is an art form used in India, Nepal, and Bangladesh. It consists of brightly colored patterns made of rice, flour, sand, flower petals, and chalk. It is usually used to decorate the entry of a house during Diwali, Holi, and other holidays related to Hinduism.
- Rangoli is thought to bring luck to a household and ward off evil spirits. It is usually symmetrical and includes elements of nature and geometrical shapes.

Materials

- Markers, Colors, or Chalk
- Design
 - You can use some of the rangoli designs found here. Or you can find a design online that suits your taste!
- Paper
- Construction paper (optional)
- Colored sand (optional)
- Flower petals (optional)

Instructions

- Print out your design guide and color! If you want to get more creative, you can cut up small pieces of construction paper and use it as a substitute for sand! Or, if you have colored sand at home, try to make a Rangoli pattern from scratch! Want to get more creative? Use flower petals!
- If you want to share your designs, try creating a Rangoli design outside on the sidewalk with chalk!
