

Asia Society Texas Center is an architectural marriage of east and west. Designed by Japan-born, Harvard-educated Yoshio Taniguchi, it combines contemporary international design with an understated elegance and serenity one associates with Asia. For his first freestanding building in the United States—previously he was best known in this country for his expansion and renovation of the Museum of Modern Art in New York—Taniguchi combined graceful design with stunningly beautiful stone, wood, and glass to give Asia Society Texas Center its distinctive character.
