

Asia Society Career Opportunity

Location: New York

Position: Program Officer Code 2202

PURPOSE:

This full-time Program Officer, based in New York, will assist in running administrative and other aspects of the Center on U.S.-China Relations, which is dedicated to promoting better understanding of U.S.-China relations through research, the distribution of timely information on critical issues, the creation of collaborative projects, and the development of creative public programming across issues including policy and business, media, arts, and culture.

The Program Officer will work closely with the Arthur Ross Center Director and the Associate Director of US Programs, to ensure the smooth running of Center projects. This includes providing administrative support to budget planning and execution, contributing to planning and holding public and private events, coordinating outreach and communications, and coordinating policy-related work including Task Forces and related working groups.

RESPONSIBILITIES:

- Support the Arthur Ross Director and Associate Director of US Programs in running the Center's activities and outreach.
- Provide administrative support for budget, grants, expenses and payments to external vendors and contributors.
- Coordinate speakers, AV, box office and publicity for both public and private events, virtual and in person, some on evenings or weekends, with some travel for events possible.
- Assist in coordination of the Task Force on US-China Policy and related policy-focused work, including helping as needed to organize participants, meetings, agendas, partnerships, public events, report rollouts, and publicity.
- Update and maintain the Center's online presence, including updating website, event calendar listings, and social media accounts.
- Update and maintain contact databases, mailing lists, media and journalist databases, and internal planning calendars.
- Coordinate drafting and sending out monthly email newsletters.
- Participate in relevant internal and external meetings relating to Center activities.
- Represent the Center at Asia Society meetings in New York, as requested.
- Other duties, as assigned.

QUALIFICATIONS:

- Two to three years of administrative experience, ideally including organizing speaker events and other programs, coordinating conferences, reconciling expenses, and providing support for grant proposals and implementation.
- Bachelor's degree, preferably in international relations/affairs, political science, public policy, Chinese history or politics, or other related area.
